a short documentary involving three different national recipe exchanges between Serbia, Bosnia, and Albania; focusing on the shared history and individual cultural significances of food from the Balkans.

creating a space where people could learn more about their neighboring countries culinary history and differences and similarities that occur between them.

inspiring people to try out new dishes, in a different context food is a significant stamp of the Balkan countries like Serbia, Bosnia and Albania to show the differences and individual perspectives on food and culture but also to expose the implicit similarities that bond all the people from the Balkans gathering recipes indicative of the rich culinary past of their community and exchange it between themselves (e.g. Serbia–Albania/Albania–Bosnia/Bosnia–Serbia), inviting other people to join and share recipes as well presenting dishes through storytelling, with a short animation telling the history and importance of it and by showing the preparation itself in people's houses for example using a lighthearted and educational tone and inviting the audience to participate as well
